Plymouth Ind., September 19, 1901.

President Roosevelt may be depended upon always to do the right thing at the right time in the right way.
He does it instinctively and without effort.

The use of conciliatory methods of arbitration in all disputes with foreign nations, so as to avoid armed strife.

The protection of the savings of the people in banks and in other forms of investment by the preservation of the commercial prosperity of the country, and the placing in positions of trust men of only the highest integrity.

President Roosevelt's first declaration must give assurance to the country, he will carry out the policies of his lamented predecessor, and he has asked Mr. McKinley's cabinet to continue as his Cabinet. In other words, the administration will proceed as if the late President had lived. Those who have any knowledge of Colonel Roosevelt's career and views did not expect anything else. He has been an outsider advocate of the policies of his illustrious predecessor.

Speaking of the responsibility of Carl Schurz, Edward Atkinson, Edward Burritt Smith, Henry Wade Rogers and other "anties" for the attack upon President McKinley the Chicago Inter Ocean says: "When gentlemen in frock coats and silk hats, occupying stations of eminence and consideration, deliberately characterize the president of the United States as a 'tyrant' and 'butcher,' as a miscreant to be despised and hated, is it surprising that some narrow-brained man, already prone by nature to violence, should go out to slay the president?"

Theodore Roosevelt, who took the oath of office Saturday, is, by several years, the youngest President the United States has ever had. He will be forty-three years old on the 27th day of October. The next youngest President was Franklin Pierce, who was forty-eight when elected. Most of our Presidents have been well past fifty years old when they were elected, and some were past sixty. The Constitution provides that no person shall be eligible to the office who shall not have attained the age of thirty-five years, so that Mr. Roosevelt is several years older than the constitutional limit. In fact, he is the prime of mature manhood and can only be called young by comparison with some of his predecessors.

The sublime courage and Christian resignation with which the dead President faced the certainty of death has touched the heart of the world.
"Good-bye, all; good-bye. It is God's way. His will be done." These are the words that have flooded eyes of thousands upon thousands unused to tears. In the grasp of death the late President's poise and courage and even his cheerfulness did not forsake him.
To him there was no "king of terrors"; to him death was not a "grim foe." Life was as sweet to him as it could be to any man; yet when he was sure that he must leave it, he did not repine. His life had been every way so clean and sincere, and his faith in God's wisdom and justice so complete that he could say: "His will be done." While in the borderland separating the world of sense from the unseen, it was natural that he should say, "nearer, my God, nearer to Thee."

Theodore Roosevelt is a plain man of the people, a typical young American of the sturdy, fearless, honest, self-reliant sort. He has faith in America and American institutions and he has ever been a preacher of American progress. He mourns deeply the lamentable tragedy that has so suddenly placed the responsibilities of government upon his shoulders, but he does not shrink from the great burden. His aim is to serve to the best of his ability, than which no man can do more. He will find his position a difficult and delicate one, far more so than he would were he taking the office in the regular course by election. He differs in method, in temperament and in characteristics from his martyred predecessor, but it should not be forgotten that his pledge to continue absolutely without variance the policy of President McKinley for the peace and prosperity and honor of our beloved country is a pledge that flows from the heart and is an expression that the policy is right. The people should, and they will, show him that they are with him in sympathy, support and confidence; they should, and will, recognize his integrity of purpose and encourage him in its fulfillment.

WORSE THAN GOLDMAN.

Mrs. Carrie Nation's anti-canteen zeal led her into an intemperate declaration against President McKinley at Steeplechase park, Coney Island, last week. In the course of her lecture she said:
"Bill McKinley deserves to die. He is the friend of the brewer and the drinking man. I have no care for him. He deserves just what he got." Emma Goldman, who is decent enough to admit that she is an anarchist, never carried intemperance to such a length as that. John Most, the whisky fiend with tangled beard, never, even in his cups, has dared to express himself so intemperately in public speech or print. It has remained for John G. Wooley, Rev. Q.
A. Morrow and their prohibition coadjutors to advise openly that murder be done and to gloat over its accomplishment.

ROOSEVELT'S POLICY.

President Roosevelt has outlined, in some detail, the policy he will follow during his incumbency of office. It will be remembered that when he took the oath of office, he stated with much definiteness:
"It shall be my aim to continue absolutely unbroken the policy of President McKinley for the peace" (and he emphasized that word), "prosperity and honor of the country."
His ideas, so far as they are formulated, as outlined to his friends at a recent conference, will be for a more liberal and extensive reciprocity in the purchase and sale of commodities, so that the over production of this country can be satisfactorily disposed of by fair and equitable arrangements with foreign countries; the abolition entirely of commercial war with other countries, and the adoption of reciprocity treaties.

The abolition of such tariffs on foreign goods as are no longer needed for revenue, if such abolition can be had without harm to our industries and labor. Direct commercial lines should be established between the Eastern coast of the United States and the ports in South America and the Pacific coast ports of Mexico, Central America and South America.
The encouraging of the merchant marine and the building of ships which shall carry the American flag and be owned and controlled by Americans and American capital.

The building and completion, as soon as possible, of the isthmian canal, so to give direct water communication with the coasts of Central America, South America and Mexico.
The construction of a cable, owned by the government, connecting our main land with our foreign possessions, notably Hawaii and the Philippines.

IN MEMORIAM.

Elson Ray Appleman, only son and child of John F. Appleman, and Laurie Appleman, was born in West Township, Marshall County, Indiana, September 18, 1883, and died at the home of his parents, September 15, 1901. The funeral was held at the Dunkard church September 17, 1901, the Rev. Kreighbaum of South Bend preaching a sermon that gave comfort and consolation to the mourning friends. The special hymns sung by the choir added to the solemnity of the surroundings. The beautiful flowers brought by loving friends, and the large number of people from far and near, (aggregating over a thousand persons) showed their love for his pure christian character and the high esteem in which he was held by all who knew him.

He was the light of the home which is now made desolate by the sudden ending of his young life; his cheerful voice and bright eye kindling with zeal and enthusiasm made his life and soul of the younger people with whom he was associated. Pleasant memories of his life are assured:
"Till the light of earth is faded, From the hearts once full of day, Till the stars of heaven are breaking Through the twilight soft and gray."

The sympathy of the vast assemblage present, for the parents and relatives, was made manifest in the serious interest and attention given to the words of the preacher, as he spoke of the Christian's hope, and said: "There is no death: What seems so is transition:
This life of mortal breath,
Is but the suburb of the life Elysian, Whose portals we call Death.

The pall bearers, were members of his graduating class, the six officiating being Ray Wilburn, Forest Wilburn, Theron Hoover, Augustus Elick, Herbert Garn and Harry Stair.
The honorary pall bearers were Priscilla Elick, Edna Zigler, Nettie Clark, Edna Flier and Gertrude Faulkner.

William Prior.

William Prior, an old and respected citizen of Tyner, died Saturday evening Sept. 14, aged 81 years.
The funeral was held at Tyner at 2:30 Monday and was largely attended. He leaves a widow and three children all grown.

Theodore Roosevelt

Born in New York, Oct. 27, 1858.
Educated at Harvard University.
Members of the New York legislature, 1882-4. Leader of the minority 1883, leader of the house 1884.
United States civil service commissioner 1889-95.

President New York police board 1895-8.

Assistant secretary of the navy 1897.

Organized Roosevelt's Rough Riders 1898.

Lieutenant colonel and colonel, in command in Cuba.

Elected governor of New York, November, 1893, with a plurality of 17,979.

Nominated for vice president, June 21, 1900.

Elected vice president, Nov. 6, 1900.

Sworn in as president, Sept. 14, on the death of William McKinley.

Residence, Oyster Bay, Long Island.

He is not a rich man as riches go with the families that owned the soil on which the metropolis of New York has been built. But his personal honesty has never been questioned nor his fidelity to a trust. Nor has there been question of his quick sympathy with the people's side of great questions.

In old-time records the Roosevelts are mentioned as sugar refiners, merchants, bankers, trustees of charitable institutions and public officials. The Roosevelts figured patriotically during the revolutionary war. Nicholas Roosevelt was a first lieutenant of the "Corsicans" of 1775. Another Roosevelt was officer of an up-country company. One of the family served in the war of 1812. The family also furnished large sums of money to the newly formed continental government and patriotically accepted the govern-

C. G. Halt.

Christopher G. Halt, one of the most prominent farmers and wealthiest citizens of North township, died at his home near Lapaz, Saturday, Sept.
14, 1901, aged 67 years.

His death was caused by cancer of the stomach and he had been confined to his home for almost a year.

Deceased was a man of great force of character, honest and upright in all his dealings and his death is a loss to the whole county as well as the community in which he lived. He leaves a widow three sons one daughter and other relatives. The funeral was held at the Dunkard church four miles north of Lapaz at 11 o'clock Monday forenoon.

FEW GREEKS IN GREECE.

Greece died because the men who made her glory had all passed away and left none of their kin, and therefore none of their kind. "Tis Greece, but living Greece no more," for the Greek of today, for the most part, never came from the loins of Leonidas or Miltiades. He is the son of the stable boys and scullions and slaves of the day of her glory, those of whom imperial Greece could make no use in her conquest of Asia. "Most of the old Greek race," says Mr. W. H. Ireland, "has been swept away, and the country is now inhabited by persons of Slavonic descent. Indeed there is strong ground for the statement that there was more of the old heroic blood of Hellas in the Turkish army of Edhem Pasha than in the soldiers of King George, who fled before them three years ago." King George himself is only an alien placed on the Grecian throne to suit the convenience of the outside powers, which to the ancient Greeks were merely factions of barbarians. In the late war some poet, addressing the spirit of ancient Greece, thus appealed to her:

Of all thy thousands grant us three
To make a new Thermopylae.
But there were not even three—not even one—"to make another Marathon," and the Turkish troops swept over the historic country with no other hindrance than the effortless deprecation of Christendom.— Popular Science Monthly.

Our Paper Industry.

Fifty pounds of paper for each individual was the amount consumed in this country last year.
The United States puts 6,000,000-000 pounds on the market annually, according to the latest statistics, and has about 1,000 mills engaged in the paper manufacture. This industry has grown from one little mill that manufactured paper from rags in Philadelphia in 1690.

While the output has increased so tremendously, and the demand has caused the substitution of wood pulp for ingredients used in the early manufacture, the principle on which it is made remains practically the same as that of China centuries ago.

ment's paper money at the value of coin.

Of his own quality of Americanism he has given this glimpse in one of his works. "I have no wish to excuse or hide our faults; for I hold that he is often the best American shortcomings. Nevertheless I am just as little disposed to give away to undue pessimism as to undue and arrogant optimism. In speaking to my own countrymen there is one point upon which I wish to lay special stress; that is the necessity for a feeling of broad, radical, intense Americanism if good work is to be done in any direction. Above all the one essential for success in every political movement which is to do lasting good is that our citizens should act as Americans; not as Americans with a prefix and qualification—not as Irish-Americans, German-Americans, native Americans—but as Americans pure and simple. * * *

In short, the most important lesson taught by the history of New York city is the lesson of Americanism—the lesson that he among us who wishes win in honor in our life and to play his part honestly and manfully, must be indeed an American in spirit and purpose, in heart and thought and deed."

To those who know him best and who care for him the most, his career seems to be summoned up in this message of his, given once to the young men of New York city.

"First and foremost be American. heart and soul, and go in with any person, heedless of anything but that person's qualifications. For myself I'd as quickly work beside Pat Dugan as with the last descendant of a patron; it literally makes no difference to me so long as the work is good and the man is in earnest. One other thing I'd like to teach the young man of wealth. That he who has not got wealth owes his first duty to his family, but he who has means owes his first duty to his state. It is ignoble to try to heap money on money. I would preach the doctrine of work to all, and to the men of wealth the doctrine of unremunerative work." That is Theodore Roosevelt.

Elson R. Appleman.

Elson R. Appleman, son of Elder John Appleman, of the German Baptist church died at his home five miles west of Plymouth, Sunday Sept. 15, 1901, aged 18 years, 11 months and 29 days.

His death was caused by inflamation of the bowels after an illness of only four days. He was a young man of more than ordinary ability, and was a general favorite in the neighborhood where he lived. His death after so short an illness has cast a gloom over the entire neighborhood and the utmost sympathy is expressed for the mourning parents.

The funeral will be held Tuesday at 2 o'clock p. m. at the German Baptist church near where he died, and the remains will be interred at the Union cemetery. It is a sad commemoration of his eighteenth birthday, but the parents and relatives can only bow in humble submission to Him "who doeth all things well."
